The concept of communication simply relies on four basic components. 1.3 Communication Components have a sender who produces a message to receivers Depending on the previous definitions, we can conclude that communication is a process used to timely and properly exchange information between a sender and a receiver to achieve a desired goal.

Communication Chapter 1 - cu

The sender initiates the communication. In a school, the sender is a person who has a need or desire to convey an idea or concept to others. The receiver is the individual to whom the message is sent. The sender encodes the idea by selecting words, symbols, or gestures with which to compose a message.

Communication: The Process, Barriers, And Improving

The person who wants to communicate is called the sender (see figure). To transfer an image to another person, the sender first must transpose or translate the images into symbols that receivers can understand. Symbols often are words but can be pictures, sounds, or sense information (e.g., touch or smell).

The Sender. The communication process begins with the sender, who is also called the communicator or source. The sender has some kind of information—a command, request, or idea—that he or she wants to share with others.

The Basic Elements of the Communication Process

Seven major elements of communication process are: (1) sender (2) ideas (3) encoding (4) communication channel (5) receiver (6) decoding and (7) feedback. Communication may be defined as a process concerning exchange of facts or ideas between persons holding different positions in an organisation to achieve mutual harmony.

7 Major Elements of Communication Process

The sender-receiver model is the simplest communication model and underpins most others. The sender has an idea or concept he/she wants the receiver to appreciate.

Background. The model includes four components to describe the communication process: sender, message, channel and receiver, each of the them are affected by many factors. The model also focuses on encoding and decoding, which happens before sender sends the message and before receiver receives the message respectively.

Sender-Message-Channel-Receiver Model of Communication

Receivers of conscious nonverbal communication are aware that they received the message and the meaning intended by the sender. The receiver of a hug, for example, generally realizes that the message is a sign of friendship. ∅ Subliminal nonverbal communications. Subliminal messages are communicated to the subconscious mind of the receiver.
