Anyway, Tesla was a genius, and was able to do something that practically no one else in recorded history has been able to do. He was able to build/picture these machines entirely in his imagination before actually starting to build it in reality. He was actually able to fix malfunctions in his mind before repairing the machines in reality as well.

Nikola Tesla: Genius or Madman?, page 1

Genius and madness have much in common but there are also important differences between them. Mostly these are to do with intelligence, self-insight and contact with reality. Salvador Dali said: "There is only one difference between a madman and me. The madman thinks he is sane. I know that I am mad".
